REPUBLICAN LEADER HOLDS

WILSON'S FOURTEEN
POINTS MAY CAUSE A
SPLIT IN NATION.

ADDRESS ALL PREPARED

Senator Lodges A Prepared Talk on the Problems of the Peace Conference Dwelling on Senate Responsibility.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Dec. 21.—Five of President Wilson's fourteen principles of peace were in the senate today by Senator Lodge, the republican leader, as questions which might lead to division among the nations which have engaged in the war.

The senator delivered a prepared address on the problems of the peace conference in which he spoke of the heavy responsibility of the senate in the work of making peace, and that no treaty can become binding upon the United States without the senate's consent and declared that untoward results could be avoided only if the senate expressed itself frankly.

"While I think it a grave mistake," he said, "on the part of the president to ignore the senate because of its ultimate responsibility in making peace, it is quite correct in his own. I have no fault to find with his not appointing senators as delegates to the peace conference. There is no obligation whatever upon him to make such appointments."

"In the present situation which is grave beyond comparison," he said, "I think it is of far importance that these concerns of the treaty should at least know the views of the senate so far as the postmaster general, in control of the cables, and Mr. Cressell, in control of the dispatches, and the opinion of the senate to be transmitted to Paris. We cannot compel information, but we are abundantly able to make our opinions known to the allies, who have plenty of other means of getting clear and even acute idea of the power of the senate in regard to treaties."

May Run All
To bring forward propositions not inoperably, and difficult task of making a binding peace with Germany, Senator Lodge said, "May run all by trying to do too much at once."

As the senator called attention to the "strange development" in connection with the pending naval appropriation bill, the advocacy of Rear Admiral Sigsbee of a program calling for a navy as large as that of England for 1926. He said he thought he had favored building more ships than any other member of the program and did not think it necessary.

"The only naval danger that we were obliged to consider in the treaty on the Atlantic coast was to get in the Pacific and I feel sure we will have a navy sufficient to furnish that fleet to the western coast. And yet at this moment we are suddenly called upon to build a fleet which will be the equal of that of England."

Of suggestions that a great navy is needed for police duty in connection with the league of nations, the senator said he would not stay on the subject who is to order that navy about the world.

Wishes View Expressed
Mr. Lodge said he would be glad if the senate debates on peace were supplemented by some definite resolutions expressing views on important points.

"Whether the senate will take such action—although I know that we have very definite opinions—I cannot say, because some senators that it is an amount of intolerable audacity for the senate even to suggest to the executive that it has opinions which ought to be considered. Personally I do not share this view."

"Peace is our object, the first step toward peace is to make a peace with the country with which we have been and are at war—that is with Germany. If the peace with Germany is to be durable, there is so far as human effort goes, impossible for Germany to break out upon the world again with a war of conquest. This cannot be done by treaty documents, and signatures of affairs, Germany at this juncture sign anything, and her pledge could be as worthless as the guarantee she gave to Belgium."

Germany Not Challenged
"It is well also to remember that Germany did not change her nature over night when she was defeated. The deep rooted ambitions, the evil principles carefully inculcated for half a century, the barbarous methods and doctrines all remain unaltered."

"I do not need to rehearse what the physical guarantees should be, for I have stated my views upon them more than once to the senate, and think there is general agreement that not only in the senate but among the American people. They include the restoration of Belgium, the return of Alsace Lorraine to France, the establishment of a Jugo-Slav state, and of an independent state for the Czechs and Slovaks. They include also the security of Greece, the settlement of Albania and Montenegro, the restoration of Rumania, the consolidation of all the Rumanian people under one government as well as the putting of Constantinople under international protection with Greece perhaps as the mandatory power to administer the affairs of the city, the independence of Armenia, the return of these people to their homes, and the restoration of the Turkish empire to its former boundaries."

POLAND JEWS PLAN SEPARATE STATE

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Warsaw, Dec. 19.—In discussing the political situation in Poland, especially as regards the Jews, Prof. J. Tuter-milich, a Polish editor and writer, said today:

"The present pogrom situation has been seized upon by the Jews at the expense of the Polish nation for the purpose of influencing the peace conference to take action to obtain national concessions."

"The Jewish question in Poland is not religious, since we have never had any religious persecution. It is political. What they really propose to do through the national party is not only to get schools, but to have their own courts of justice and their own parliament. They really wish to form a state within a state, yet they intend also to take part of our own political life. It is absurd."

"On the pogrom situation, it is mostly propaganda. For instance, two months ago in Cracow I read that there had been pogroms in Warsaw. I found that the only foundation for the story was that the king had quarrelled between two butchers, one a Jew and the other a Christian."

"The physical guarantee which I have thus far suggested all have one object and that is to have the Jews in Poland. They cannot attempt conquest in Russia or the east and that the Slavic populations which she mercilessly used in her wars, can never be so used by her again."

"In addition to these guarantees, there must be heavy indemnities paid by Germany for the ruin she has wrought in Belgium and northern France, and in Italy, and in the desolate, through the use of submarines. In those indemnities, the United States must have its proper and proportional share. The indemnities would be used to build up a military force in Poland, to build up a navy, and to build up a fleet of ships destroyed by submarines and its people murdered on the Lusitania and other vessels, but a suitable restitution, in part at least, of the vast expenses forced upon the United States."

"It will be for the peace conference to determine what disposition should be made of the German colonies, but one thing is essential, and that is that they should not be turned to the tyrannical misgovernment of Germany and that she should be deprived of those means of extending her commerce and her military outposts in all parts of the world."

"It is the duty of the allies and the United States to meet and determine what terms they will impose upon Germany, and to enforce them, and not until then, call in the representatives of Germany and impose the terms upon them."

The League of Nations
Of the league of nations proposal Senator Lodge said no definite plan has yet been put forth that would not cause indefinite controversy.

"The attempt to build up a league of nations, to mean an effective league, with power to enforce its decrees," he said, "can tend only to embarrass the peace that we ought to make at once with Germany. It is a peace that would be to come before the senate, it might endanger the peace treaty and force amendments."

"Are we preparing to give a majority vote to the troops and ships of the United States to go to war? Unless we are prepared to do so, we are not prepared to join a league of peace, which is going to be a posthumous question of freedom of the seas, Senator Lodge said it was another unadvised question and that it is a question of belligerent right of blockade. I think the United States will hesitate before it abandons its weapon absolutely necessary for its own safety. I cannot imagine that England, without a moment's thought, is abandoning the belligerent right of blockade."

Secret Diplomacy.
Discussing secret diplomacy, the senator said this is not a new thing. Wilson's need to be incorporated in secret treaties never have and cannot exist in this country.

Chicago, Dec. 21.—Edmund T. Meinel, chairman of the socialist party, Milwaukee county Wisconsin, was the first witness examined at today's session of the trial of five socialist leaders charged with violating the Espionage laws.

He told of a socialist chautauque held at Milwaukee in 1917 at which William A. Kruse, one of the defendants, and others spoke. Kruse received for me the speech.

Active In Milwaukee
Miss Mary McDowell and Adolph Germer, the latter also being a defendant also spoke. Witness said he had been active in Milwaukee in socialist work for several years. He served one term as sheriff and held other offices. At one election he said the socialist polled 35,000 out of 40,000 votes cast in Milwaukee. Just of the socialist strength, he said, came from young men.

Head of Draft Board
He said he served as chairman of a draft board which enrolled 3,200 men for army service. He said a majority of these were socialists and not one refused to report for military duty when called. Witness said he never read any of the socialist or other anti-war pamphlets. He was employed at various times on the Milwaukee leader, owned by Victor L. Berger, one of the defendants.

State Senator Louis A. Arnold of Milwaukee, was the next witness. He is a socialist and was tax collector. He is secretary of the socialist state committee but he had no knowledge of distribution of anti-war pamphlets in Wisconsin.

On cross examination the government introduced records seized in a raid on socialist headquarters in Chicago to show that socialist leaders had sent out anti-war pamphlets to be shipped to Arnold at Milwaukee. Witness said he did not recollect having received them.

Leo Wolfsohn, telegraph editor of the leader, the next witness, said that shortly after America entered the war Mr. Berger came to him and said: "I don't want you to be unfair in handling the war. We are against all Kaiser and Kings and because this country is at war with Germany we must keep our mouths shut."

Witness denied receipt of instructions to give Berlin dispatches preference over those from London and Frankfurt. He said that at the request of J. E. Harris, the managing editor, he signed a protest to Berger against publishing the St. Louis war program of socialist leaders.

CLASH RESULTS WHEN BECKER REFUSES TO ANSWER QUESTIONS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Dec. 21.—Cross-questioning by Senator Reed of Missouri, who is not a member of the committee, led to a sharp clash at today's session of the senate committee investigating German propaganda between the Missouri senator and Alfred L. Becker, deputy attorney general of New York, and Major E. Lowry Humes, in charge of the inquiry.

Mr. Becker refused to answer questions by Senator Reed as to the identity of persons employed by the attorney general of New York to get information concerning the German propaganda system. Senator Reed demanded that the committee instruct the witness to answer.

Mr. Becker answered the senator if he desired to have information on "matters relating to his client, Mr. Hearst," whereupon Senator Reed told the committee that Mr. Becker's reply had been framed in an insolent manner and denied that he was appearing for Mr. Hearst.

"You don't mean to say that Mr. Hearst is my client," asked Senator Reed.

"I beg your pardon," said Mr. Becker.

"You needn't beg my pardon," Senator Reed retorted.

"Your answer was what your testimony has been all the way through this case and it does not reflect on your veracity. I am here in the interest of trying to develop some truth through a mass of testimony that has been distorted."

CHRISTMAS CHEER FOR POOR FAMILIES

Diners, Clothing and Toys to be Provided for Forty Families By Local Charitable Organizations.

Genuine Christmas cheer for forty poor families in the city is being planned by local charitable organizations. Through the united efforts of the Associated Charities, Salvation Army and the Elks lodge, substantial Christmas dinners and plenty of good warm clothing will be provided for those people of the city who might otherwise spend an unhappy holiday. The giving of toys this year will not be as great as heretofore, it being the plan at present not to purchase any new ones for the youngsters. A number of toys which were made in the grade schools and which have been on exhibition in the Soldiers' club room for the past week will be turned over to the charitable organizations for distribution among the poor families. It is hoped that their hearts may be made glad on Christmas day.

Captain Fleming of the Salvation Army is planning to provide dinners for thirty families. Rev. Henry Williams, president of the Associated Charities, will care for the other ten families, while F. E. Green of the Elks will see that plenty of clothing and articles of food are given to the needy families.

The three organizations are working in perfect harmony in order that every family in the city may be made happy on Christmas day. Distribution of the dinners, clothing, and food will be made next Tuesday.

THERE'S EVERY CONVENIENCE IN JANESVILLE!

It's a great thing to live within easy reach of a GOOD TOWN, like Janesville.

Man--is a dependent creature--and doesn't get on well by himself.

His primary needs are FOOD, SHELTER and CLOTHING--but he adds to these many more things--according to his tastes and circumstances.

He's a SOCIAL being--and wants AMUSEMENT and COMPANIONSHIP.

When he's SICK, he wants to be NURSED, and DOCTORED.

When his TEETH act up, he wants a DENTIST--has got to HAVE a DENTIST--because present-day USAGES of civilized society DEMAND that he have a dentist.

When there's a MARRIAGE, he wants a MINISTER.

When there's a DEATH, he wants an UNDERTAKER.

When there's a DOCUMENT, a DEED, a LEASE, or WILL to be drawn up, he wants a LAWYER.

When there's PROPERTY to be protected against FIRE, he wants an INSURANCE man.

When his CHRONOMETER gets out of order, he wants a WATCHMAKER--and so it goes.

There are a thousand things, any one of which a man is apt to need at any time, and need badly, that he would have to be prepared to do without--if he lived in a wilderness--instead of within a short ride of a splendidly convenient, all-round city like Janesville.

The manufacturers and merchants of Janesville at all times are capable of meeting any demand that you might make upon them--and so are Janesville PROFESSIONAL men.

Send to Janesville when you need a DOCTOR--all schools of medicine are ably represented here. There are also DENTISTS of skill, LAWYERS of ability and reputation, ARCHITECTS, BUILDERS, SURVEYORS, INSURANCE UNDERWRITERS, MEN in ALL useful pursuits--each and every one of them imbued with a certain community PRIDE--the WILL to SERVE--and the same interest in the building up of their TOWN, that is so noticeable in Janesville STORES.

Learn to LEAN upon Janesville!

There's EVERYTHING HERE--and the LATCH-STRING is OUT.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT

The author of these "Saturday Night" articles is temporarily "laid up" and he is therefore presenting an occasional "Lay Sermon" from the pen of the late Howard W. Tilton, formerly of Janesville, which have been published in book form, but never before in this paper. Mr. Tilton put that touch of human interest into his writings which appeals to the heart and holds the interest. Today's article is entitled:

STOP YOUR PRAYING.

"He prayeth well, who loveth well,
Both man and bird and beast."

"Let us pray"—hold on, old man, just a minute, for you're not ready to pray yet. You are on your knees all right and you ought to stay on them for a while, but there's a good bit of repentance to be done before you are in real good condition to lead in the family prayers this Sunday morning. Stay right where you are and do a little thinking, anyway.

How did you get up this morning? God's cheeriest angel of the heaven sent a sunshiny smile into your bedroom window to gladly welcome your return from fairy dreamland, and you angrily yanked down the curtain to shut it out, and commenced the day with a scowl which hasn't yet left your face. You couldn't find but one of your slippers and because your little girl's puppy playmate had dragged it into the other room in a frolicsome chase, you kicked the dog and gave the innocent prattler a brutal blow, not with your fist—you were too cowardly to do that, for fear of the neighbors—but you struck the child with that cruel tongue of yours, and the little heart was made sad, there were tears in those great brown eyes, and—now don't you feel like a brute?

"Let us pray"—not yet—a little more repentance. Breakfast was a little late this morning and as you looked across the table at the sweet-faced madonna of the tea tray was there any good morning greeting, wreathed in a loving smile, to send cheer to the tired little woman who had done as hard a week's work as you, and who had sacrificed her needed Sunday morning nap to wrestle with the obstinacy of a smoky stove, to get a clean towel for one child, to hunt up a missing stocking for another, to untie the knot in the perverse shoe-string, to pin and to button, and at the same time keep the steak from burning on and the coffee from boiling over? What reward was there for her? A snappy chiding, a scowl because the steak had got cold while waiting for you to put on a clean Sunday collar so that you would look all right in the deacon's pew, a frown because the cakes were a little burned in the eagerness to comply with your "hurry up, now," a snatching up of the morning paper and a selfish devouring of the news, while the others about the board maintained a deathlike silence lest they should disturb "papa."

"Let us pray"—wait a minute. When you took from the table the big family Bible, and selfishly seated yourself in the only rocking chair in the room, you were mad—yes, you were—because wife kept you waiting a minute while she put on some water for the dishes, so that it could be heating while that long prayer of yours was being said. That rollicking boy who had rather be in purgatory than in a chair, couldn't resist the temptation to take a peep at the new top which was just sticking out of his jacket pocket, and you damned him. Oh, no, you didn't do it with your tongue, you didn't put your cursing into English, you are too pious for that, but you damned him just the same and in a language which the boy learned to understand long before he learned to talk.

"Let us pray"—just a minute more. Open that family Bible again and look at the page headed "Marriages and Births." You've taken great pains to fill it out, and it is the most sacred page in the book. You say that's your writing? Not a bit of it. You simply held the pen, and dipped it in the ink bottle. God did the writing. "Married."—did you write that? Not a bit of it. Don't you remember as she leaned on your arm as you walked down the carpeted steps of her old home and you placed her so gently in the carriage in which you were to take her to the new home, you never saw such beauty of brown eyes, you never felt such wealth of chestnut tresses, you never had such pride of strength and protection for the trembling, clinging form of grace and loveliness.

"Married"—do you still think you wrote it? Don't you hear those words, "Whom God hath joined together?" Who is the man who dares put asunder? Look up at the mirror over the grate. You will see him. It's the same face that smiled in loving protection twenty years ago, when God put that pen in your hand and bade you write in the new family Bible "Married." It's the same face that frowned so this morning because the cakes were scorched. It is the face of the man who dares put asunder.

"Born?" Did you write that? Not a bit of it. Don't you remember that morning when that beauty of brown eyes was hidden by the modest drooping of the long lashes and that wealth of chestnut tresses rested on your shoulder as heaven's most loving secret was whispered in your ear by the lips of the angel to whom it was first told? That secret was by and by told to your friends, and as you proudly held that little bundle of frilled and founced robes in your arms, and listened to these friends as they told you it was the finest boy in the world, you thought they didn't put it half strong enough. That precious bundle is larger now, and wears a jacket, and sits on the chair with every coltish nerve quivering with activity, and when he just takes a peep at that new top, you,—well, we won't say more.

"Let us pray,"—yes, but just begin where it says, "Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us." There, that will do. Have you forgiven those who trespassed against you? How about the tired little wife and her scorched cakes? How about the slipper and the little girl and her puppy playmate? How about that boy and his top? Forgiven? You smile.

"Let us pray,"—yes, pray, pray all day, if you want to. Long or short, your prayer will be heard now.

STREET CAR SERVICE MUST BE IMPROVED TO MEET THE DEMANDS OF A BIGGER CITY

Officials of the Janesville Traction Company Have Declared That They Are Ready to Set Their Lines to Improve System and Attempt to Get Back Some of the Money They Have Sunk.

(By Harry V. Ross)

Perhaps there is no public service institution in the city which arouses more interest in its affairs by the mere mention of its name than the Janesville Traction company. This is true because the public has been disappointed in the manner in which the traction company has given service. Whether the company has been in the wrong or whether the public has taken the wrong attitude is a debatable question and one which at this time concerns us to little extent.

The big question is "What will the Janesville Traction company do in the future to keep pace with the development that the city is bound to make in the next few years?"

That it must give better service is a conclusion that has not only been reached by the public, but by the men who have invested their money in a concern which has been a losing venture for years. The stockholders of the Janesville Traction company, as most everyone knows, have sent good money after bad, in keeping the street cars moving. They have faced a hopeless problem and some credit must be given them for the spirit they have shown in keeping the lines in operation despite the fact that they have lost money.

At this time a definite expression can not be obtained from officials as regards plans for the future. Until the trend of development is indicated, it is not to be expected that any plans will be made. However, officials of the company have assured officials of the city that when it was shown that Janesville is going to increase in population and that there will be a real need for an adequate street car service in this city, the company will make the necessary improvements. In fact as the development of the city takes definite shape, the improvement of the street car system will follow, according to these officials.

For the present, slight expenditure of money would have to be made in order to care for a greater population. It is natural to suppose that the portion of the city in the vicinity of the General Motors Corporation plant will develop more rapidly than some more remote portions. That section can be cared for by the lines which now tap it. It perhaps would be necessary for the company to lay double tracks along that route which reaches Spring Brook. It is understood that officials of the company have suggested to the city engineer that in making plans for the Jackson street bridge, provision should be made for double street car tracks over that structure.

New equipment will doubtless have to be added with the coming of more people to the city. None of the cars are over-crowded at this time so that people living in sections of the city now touched by the system will be able for some time to come to go to and from the Spring Brook section without difficulty.

One of the first steps the company will have to take after the plant is in operation is to provide a schedule which will get the men to and from work. Officials of the company, however, express the opinion that there will be no hitch in this arrangement. They are willing to make a bid for all the business they can get in the hope that the system can be reclaimed and put on a paying basis, they say.

The Janesville Traction company is operating under an indeterminate permit issued by the Wisconsin railroad commission. It surrendered its franchise in 1916. Regulation is determined solely by the state commission and the only recourse the city has, according to the belief of officials, is to go to the commission if the regulations are not carried out, or buy the system.

Stockholders of the company declare that they would have been willing at any time in the past to sell the system to the city. In fact they would have been glad at any time to have been released from the obligation of keeping the cars moving. They have been operating at a loss and it has been through the efforts of local men that the cars were not put into the hands and the system abandoned.

With the prospect of the company being willing to better the service as the result of the stimulating influence of a bigger city, Janesville should, it would seem, give all the encouragement possible to any move which would maintain the system.

The Rockford and Interurban company has been paying the power bill for the Janesville Traction company. It has also assumed the expense of conducting the office business of the local system. It pays the Janesville Traction company $2,500 a year for the right to use the tracks inside the city limits. The revenue from local passengers has not been sufficient, officials of the company claim, to pay the overhead charges which include taxes and interest on investment.

No matter what the position of the company is at this time, the fact remains that Janesville must have an adequate street railway system and plans must be made in the near future to work out a scheme which will care for the city's transportation problems.

Resume of Moving Picture Programs Of Last Week

(By Mrs. Abbie Helme.)

Four minute men and Red Cross slides have kept things lively in the theaters during the past week. Also a war saving slide has appeared now and then, to remind the public to buy thrift stamps. A good two-reel battle picture film was shown both at the Apollo and at the Beverly. At the latter the subject was the air-planes of England, and some spectacular flying was done, in showing off the planes.

"Secret Strings," with Oliver Tellas, was the offering at this theatre for Sunday. It was a clever story, with some detective work, and an unexpected ending which gave the audience a thrill. The "Fedora" of Pauline Frederick, was played with charm and beauty. It is a Russian story, where her lover is killed in a duel and she tries to lure his destroyer to punishment only to fall in love with him herself. She is saved from suicide, and lives to enjoy happiness with her lover. Wonderful scenery, and magnificent settings help to give realism to the picture. Billie Burke was her light, graceful and bewitching self in "In Pursuit of Polly," which was given later in the week. A short sketch of the Judge Brown stories of experiences was given with another program on Thursday, and Charles Ray on Friday gave one of his character studies, on a patriotic subject. This was called "The Claws of the Hun."

The Majestic had "The Making" for its Sunday picture. It is a southern story and had a setting of old family mansions and darkies for its background. Gladys Leslie was the lovely heroine who had an inventor father, who wanted to sell his invention to sharpers. The hero steals the model to save it, and so incurs the suspicion of the girl and her friends. Later in the week, an interesting story of rather broad type of humor, was presented in "All Night." Carmel Myers was the pretty girl who on dining at the home of a friend, was suddenly interrupted by a visitor who played host, and the real husband and wife personated the servants who had suddenly departed. Western capitalist was being entertained, and the thing must be well done. Amusing complications resulted, which kept things happening all night, and made an entertaining picture.

The Thirteenth Commandment

By RUPERT HUGHES

"No, not rich at all, as rich people go. But he was mentioned the other day in the will of an old aunt he used to be nice to. He's nice to everybody." Duane met them now and paused, hunched, to greet Daphne with flatteringly cordiality. She was greatly set up to be remembered. She presented him to her mother, who was completely upset at having to meet so famous an aristocrat right out in the street when she was still flustered over the ferocious price of Daphne's new dress. "Will you have a bite of lunch with me?" asked Duane. "We were just going to have something somewhere," said Mrs. Kip. "My husband would object," said Lella. "I'm not inviting you," said Duane. "I'm inviting the genuine Mrs. Kip. You may come along as old married chaperon, if you have to." "But Miss Kip is engaged." "So I suspected. That's why I'm inviting her. I feel safe." As they turned east into Forty-fourth street and entered Delmonico's, the carriage man saluted Duane, pedestrian as he was, called him by name, and seemed to be happier for seeing him. The doorman smiled and bowed him in by name, and Duane thanked him by name. The hat-bows greeted him by name and did not give him a check. The head waiter beamed as if a long-awaited guest of honor had come, and the captains bowed and

LUNGS GREW WORSE IN STATE HOSPITAL

Mr. Randall Promptly Got Well at Home. Passes Strict Examination. "Three years ago I was afflicted with tuberculosis of the lungs. I was finally sent to the State Tuberculosis Hospital at Rockville, where I remained three months, getting worse all the time, and I persuaded the doctors to let me go home. I was very weak, weighed 125 pounds, had fever all the time, and was very weak. As soon as I got home I started taking Milks Emulsion, and commenced to improve at once. In a few months I was back to 130 pounds and had completely regained my health. Since then I have been employed by Valentine & Co., meat packers, and am able to push the most arduous work. I am in perfect health."—Sam Randall, 531 So. 17th St., Terre Haute, Ind. Hundreds of people just as badly afflicted as Mr. Randall was told this same story. Why not try it if you are not satisfied with the benefit it costs you nothing. Milks Emulsion is a pleasant nutritive food and a powerful medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, getting away with all head of colds and flu. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. As Duane's mother and strong arm, Milks Emulsion is strongly recommended to run-down nervous people, and it has produced amazing results in many cases of tuberculosis of the lungs. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are promptly relieved—usually on the first day. It works like a magic on colds. This is the only solid emulsion made, and it is the only one that is eaten with a spoon, like ice cream. A truly wonderful medicine for weak, sickly children. No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Milks Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles, and if you are not satisfied with the results, your money will be promptly refunded. owed. Duane did not ask his guests what they would have. The head waiter told him in a low voice what he ought to have. Daphne rejoiced. All luxury was music to her. Fine clothes, fine foods on fine dishes, fine horses, motors, furniture, fine everything, gave her an exaltation of soul like the thrill of a religion. New York was heaven on earth. The streets were gold, the buildings of Jasper, and the people angels—good angels or bad, as the case might be, but still angels. She wanted to be an angel. Among the squads of men and women camped about the little tables she made out Sheila Kemble again, in a knot of elderly women of manifest importance. "Isn't that Sheila Kemble?" Daphne asked. "Yes, that's Sheila," said Duane, and he waved to her and she to him. He turned back to Daphne. "Awfully nice girl. Like to meet her?" "I'm crazy to." "I'd bring you together now, but she's completely surrounded by grand dames." He named the women, and Mrs. Kip gaped at them as if they were group of Valkyries in Valhalla. It startled her to see them paying such court to an actress. She said so. "All great successes love one another," Duane explained. "Those old ladies were geniuses at getting born in the best families, and Sheila has earned her place. She looks a bit like your daughter, don't you think?" Mrs. Kip tilted her head and studied Miss Kemble and nodded. She made the important amendment. "She looks like she used to look like Daphne."

"That's better," said Tom Duane. "Miss Kip might be her understudy." "How much does an understudy get?" said Daphne, abruptly. "I haven't the faintest idea!" Duane exclaimed. "Not much, I imagine, except an opportunity." "Is it true that Miss Kemble makes so much?" "I'd like to trade incomes with her, that's all. Her manager, Reber, was telling me that she would clear fifty thousand dollars this year." Mrs. Kip was aghast. Daphne was electrified. She surprised Duane with another question: "You said Miss Kemble was married?" "Yes, and has children, and loves her husband. But she couldn't stand idleness. She's just come back to the stage after several years of rusting in a small city." Daphne fired one more question point-blank: "Do you think I could succeed on the stage?" "Why not?" he answered. "You have—with your mother's permission—great beauty and magnetism, a delightful voice, and intelligence. Why shouldn't you succeed? You would probably have a peck of trouble getting started, but—Do you know any managers?" "I never met one." "Well, if you ever decide that you want to try it, let me know, and I can probably force somebody to give you a job." "I'll remember that," said Daphne, daskly. She said nothing more while the luncheon ran its course. The women got rid of Tom Duane gracefully—Lella asked him to put them in a taxi cab, as they had still much shopping to do. They rode to a department store, and Lella started another account. They rode back to the apartment. There they found a day letter from Daphne's father to her mother. "As you see by papers big Cowper firm failed today for ten million dollars this hits us hard you better come home not buy anything more situation serious but hope for best don't worry very love. WESLEY." Mrs. Kip dropped into a chair. The shock was so great that it shook first from her a groan of sympathy for her husband. "Your poor father! And he's worked so hard and been so careful." Bayard came home late for dinner and in a state of grave excitement. The great Cowper wholesale establishment had fallen like a steep cliff, crushing many a house. Indirectly it had rattled the windows of Bayard's firm, had stopped the banks from granting an important loan. Bayard spent a bad day downtown. The news of his father's distress was a heavy blow. But he tried to dispense encouragement to the three women who could not quite realize what all the excitement was about, or why the disaster of a big chain of wholesale stores would be of any particular importance to them. Bayard was just saying: "I tell you, Lella honey, I was the wise boy when I grabbed you, for now I've got you, and I need you. Thank the Lord I'm not loaded up with debt. I've kept clear of that."

Lella said nothing, but thought hard. Bayard was silent. Later the door-bell rang and a young sewing girl brought two big boxes from Dutilh's. They were so big that there was no concealing them. Lella made a timid effort to escape with hers, but Bayard was full of a cheerful curiosity: "What's all that, honey?" "Oh, it's just a little thing I picked up today at Dutilh's." "What is it, a scarf or something? Give a fellow a look at it!" He began to untie the knot. Sealed across the cord was an envelope, with a statement. Bayard tore it free. Lella snatched at it. Bayard laughed and dodged her. Lella pursued. It was a ghastly game of tag for her, and Daphne and her mother looked on in guilty dread. Bayard, whooping with laughter, dashed into his room and closed the door, held it fast while Lella pounded and pleaded with him. His laughter was quenched sharply. There was a silence. He opened the door and walked out, a sickly pallor at his lips, the statement in his hand. "This can't be right, honey," Bayard Kip to Dutilh, doctor. Peach-blow satin gown—two hundred and seventy-five dollars. The price is ridiculous, and I have no account there." "He—he insisted on my opening one."

"But I don't want to open any accounts. I pay my bills in thirty days or discount them for cash. I can't pay this in thirty days. Every penny I can see ahead of me is laid out." "I'm sorry," Lella faltered. "You said the times were getting better." "I thought they were. I hoped they were. But they've gone bad again. Besides, I was trying to cheer you up, to give you a happy honeymoon. And I bought you everything you saw abroad. And it wasn't enough! When will you get enough clothes?" Lella had stared incredulous at the calamitous result of her tender impulse to beautify herself in his eyes. Then tears came gushing and she ran to her room and locked the door. Bayard did not follow her. He turned for comfort to his mother and Daphne. He noted the other box. Daphne had not dared to open it. Bayard ripped the envelope from its cord and read: "Bayard Kip to Dutilh, Dr. Parchment-toned gown, for Miss Daphne Kip, two hundred and seventy-five dollars."

He was parchment-toned himself as he shook the statement at Daphne, and whispered, huskily, "What's this?" Daphne could not muster any courage. She explained with craven remorse, "I saw a gown that I needed there, and I—I—He offered to let it on your account till I could get the money." Bayard was choked with wrath and a terror greater than hers. "I go to my office and work like a fiend all day, and I come home to find that my wife and my sister have run me into debt for—five hundred and fifty dollars. And the firm, the big firm I work for, had to extend a note for seven hundred and fifty because we couldn't meet it!" His mother tried to stem the tide of Bayard's rage, to turn his wrath with a soft answer: "I guess it's all my fault, honey. The dresses looked so pretty on the girls I urged them to take them. You ought to see how beautiful they are. Go put the dress on, Daphne, and let your brother see how sweet you look in it."

"sweet! she looks sweet in it! It's beautiful! And that justifies anything. Lord, what did you make 'em out of, these women?" Mrs. Kip nudged Daphne and whispered, "Go on, put the dress on; let him see you in it." She spoke with great canniness, but Daphne stared at her with derision, and edged away and spoke in a tone as biting as cold blue vitriol. "Put it on, mother! Do you think I'd ever wear the thing? I'll send it back tomorrow morning at daybreak. And I'll never take a thing that any man pays for as long as I live." Bayard roared at her over his shoulder: "You won't take anything that any man pays for, eh? What are you going to live on—air?" She answered him, grimly, "There are several million women in this country earning their own living, and I'm going to be one of them." His comment was a barking, "Hah!" She hugged the box away to her room. Bayard fung himself into a chair and listened to the cauldron of his own hateful thoughts. Gradually they ceased to bubble and stew. He could hear now the muffled beat of Lella's sorrow. He resisted it for a while, sneered at it, raged at it, and then at the cruelty of the world. Lella's sobs had stopped now and Bayard listened for them anxiously. Perhaps she had died of grief. A lasso seemed to have caught him about the shoulders; it was dragging him to the door. He went there at last, and listened. He heard a low whimpering, unendurable appealing. He tapped on the door and called through it. "Lella, honey love, forgive me. I've seen the little gown. It's beautiful. You shall have it—and a dozen like it. Please forgive me and love me again. And I'll buy you anything you want. Please. Please don't keep me standing outside your door. Honey! Lella love!" The door opening, he slipped through to take refuge with his Lella. A moment later the doorbell rang. Daphne checked the maid whose ears had been fascinatingly entertained, and told her that if the caller were Mr. Wimbura he was to wait outside in the hall. It was Wimbura and Daphne went out to him. He greeted her with the zest of a young lover. Daphne gave him a cold cheek to kiss, and then, pulling her engagement ring from her finger, placed it in his hand. "What—what's this, Daphne?" he stammered. "It's your ring. I'm giving it back. The engagement is off—indefinitely." "For heaven's sake, why? What have I done?" "Nothing. Neither have I. But I'm going to do something."

"What are you going to do, Daphne?" "I don't know—but something." "Don't you love me any more?" "Just as much as ever—more than ever. And I'll prove it, too." "Prove it by putting the ring back on."

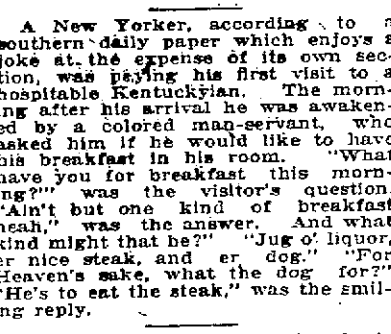

"Never! Send it back and save your money. That's what I'm going to do with what I've bought. Kiss me good night and go, please." She left him outside and closed the door as lovingly as she could. While Clay waited for the elevator to come up and take him down he stared at the ring with sheep's eyes, tossed it, and caught it awkwardly, and laughed and almost spoke his thought aloud: "Funny thing. I haven't paid for it yet. Got an insulting letter from the jeweler, too, this very afternoon."

But Daphne was thumbing the telephone book to see if she could find Tom Duane's number. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

REAR ADMIRAL VICTOR BLUE.

Rear Admiral Victor Blue, Spanish war hero, who was promoted from captain's rank on December 2, and appointed chief of the bureau of navigation, assumes his duties with a record of achievement. He was commanding officer of the United States super-dreadnought Texas when Secretary Daniels recommended him for promotion. He will succeed Rear Admiral Leigh C. Palmer, who recently was relieved for duty at sea.

Rear Admiral Blue was chief of the bureau of navigation from 1913 until 1916, when he applied for sea duty. He served with credit as chief of the bureau and promulgated many reforms for the upkeep of the personnel of the navy. He fought against "swords" points with the "small navy men" in the senate throughout the tenure of his office.

The promotion of Rear Admiral Blue followed shortly after he had been brought up before a general court-martial and reduced ten numbers for having run the Texas around while cruising in home waters. The original sentence pronounced called for a reduction of twenty numbers.

Rear Admiral Blue first won fame in the Spanish-American war. He was assigned to duty on board the converted cruiser Suwanee and took part in the blockade of Santiago. Admiral Sampson knew that part of the Spanish fleet was in Santiago harbor, but it was rumored that part of the fleet, including some of the most powerful cruisers, was abroad.

Transports were held at Key West while the navy officials vainly sought some confirmation of this rumor. The original sentence pronounced called for a reduction of twenty numbers.

with Spanish warships at large.

The greater number of our battle-ships were cruising in Cuban waters and most of them off Santiago. Rear Admiral, then Lieutenant, went ashore and coaching Spanish cavalry he and his Cuban guide went in the rear of the harbor and there counted the Spanish ships.

He rode back through the Cuban jungles, often leaving the beaten trail as he heard horsemen approaching. Time and again the Spaniards passed within a few yards of him, but he managed to escape detection. He finally won his way back to the coast where he was picked up and carried to his ship.

He made a full report of what he had seen. The troop ships were ordered to proceed to Cuba. For this service Blue was promoted from the rank of junior grade lieutenant to senior grade, and won the two full stripes.

While cruising back and forth in front of Santiago the American fleet was annoyed by a fort that took pot shots at them any time they approached within range. One day after a bombardment, Lieutenant Blue asked for permission to knock down the fort's flag. It was granted, conditional upon accomplishment in three shots. The staff and flag tumbled at the third shot.

When the peace protocol was signed, bringing the war with Spain to an end, the citizens of South Carolina ordered a medal struck off and presented to their hero. Honors were heaped upon him throughout the land.

YANK MARKSMANSHIP
THE BEST IN WORLD

M. J. Sheffield of Syracuse With Several Months' Experience on Battlefields, Praised American Gunners.

Many thrilling experiences in the war zone are related by M. J. Sheffield of Syracuse, N. Y., who has been spending the past week in town, and who recently addressed the Rotary club in the interests of the Red cross. He saw many months of active service in France with the United States heavy artillery of the 2nd division, and reluctantly tells of a number of personal experiences in a most interesting way.

He saw active duty in many parts of the fighting front until he was wounded in the left side by shrapnel and sent to a base hospital to be later sent back to this country to be discharged.

Of the accuracy of the American gunners, Mr. Sheffield cannot speak too highly. Their marksmanship was the best in the world and was constantly marveled at by the French and English. "The first shot always came near the mark," said Mr. Sheffield, "but if it missed, the second one was certain to find the objective."

Although his battery was located several miles behind the first line and they very rarely saw their target, so accurate was the observation help that the work of the gunners was perfect.

He tells of the experience of one of his comrades who was standing with his head above the top of the trench laughing at the predicament of another comrade who had been sent sprawling by the concussion of a shell which exploded nearby. While he stood with his mouth open, a spent bullet coming from the German lines entered his mouth, knocked out one of his wisdom teeth and lodged in his jaw.

FARM LABORERS RECEIVED THEIR MEDALS YESTERDAY

Over forty boys and girls of the Janesville high school were yesterday awarded medals for farm labor during the past summer. The medals were received by Allen West through the United States Boy's Working Reserve.

Mr. Smith, chairman of the Rock County Council of Defense, assisted by Mr. West distributed the medals. Mr. Smith told the boys and girls of the tremendous amount of farm work they have performed throughout the summer and the predicament the farmers would have been in had not the boys and girls come to their aid.

Smith warned them that next summer they will also be needed to help with the crops, as they will be larger than ever before and will go far in supplying the peoples of Europe.

TWO GIRLS CHARGED WITH BEING INCORRIGIBLE

Testimony was taken by Judge Maxwell yesterday in the cases against Violet Watson and Belle Cripps two young girls who are said to be incorrigible.

The case against Violet Watson was held open as it developed that she has been behaving during the past few weeks. Belle Cripps was placed in the custody of Superintendent Hill of the Vocational school.

Whitewater News

Whitewater, Dec. 23.—Mrs. G. B. Averill left today for Manhattan, Kansas, where she will spend the holidays with her daughter Grace, who is teaching there. After the holidays she will meet her sister from Maine, and together they will go to California to spend the remainder of the winter with Miss Mildred Averill at Los Angeles.

the government service, as rural carrier on route No. 8.

A lively runaway occurred yesterday morning. A three horse team hauling milk was coming away from the condensary and started to run. In going up Main street they missed several autos by a matter of inches. They were stopped on upper Main street with small damage to the wagon.

Some think more of the game, and some think more of the prize; but whoever loves either one too much will not win the other.

SIDE LIGHTS on the CIRCUS BUSINESS

By D. W. WATT
Former Manager Burr Robbins and Later Treasurer of Adam
Forepaugh Circuses

For something like forty years Havana, Cuba has been the one great city for the winter circus which usually runs about five months. Some 35 or 36 years ago it was the Orinon Brothers who were the great circus performers at that time, both of whom I knew well, but like the great showman of this country they have passed on and made room for others. The following letter from Havana tells of the great hit which was made by the world's greatest bare-back rider "Wirth" who for the past two years has been one of the greatest features and drawing cards of the Ringling Brothers in this country.

Santanyo Antigua looked and felt like May Wirth, extensively and she given a wonderful reception on her first appearance in Havana. She was allotted the distinction of closing the first part and brought down the house with her marvelous riding, the patrons standing on their seats in order not to miss a single feature or feat. The press of Havana gave the show wonderful making special mention of May Wirth the evening paper, La Prensa, stating that it was not right to call her the Queen of the Arena, as she was far greater than that. The program on the opening night ran like clockwork due to the hard work of Mr. Stephanie, the equestrian director.

As I have mentioned before, it was in the middle 80's when I went from Philadelphia to New York to bring something over forty Europeans—performers who had landed in some two weeks before time for the great Forepaugh show in Philadelphia. Among those people were the great artists and Silbons who are still in business and the coming season will be one of the big features with the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey shows combined.

Toto Siegrist and Eddie Silbon have always been close friends of mine and while Toto Siegrist is nearing sixty years of age and while Eddie Silbon is well above 80 they are still doing the greatest aerial act anyone could wish to see. They are still doing the business and thousands of people have watched them turn their double somersaults while in the air from one side of the canvas to the other. The following letter tells of their plans for the coming season.

"Toto Siegrist is a busy man these days. In addition to looking after the interests of the big Siegrist-Silbon aerial act which has been recognized for the world's greatest show, Toto is building a carnival show which will take the road early in the spring. Many people and shows are being engaged, and it is as good as a business known fact the circus veteran was contemplating launching out into the street business, he was inundated with applications for space with his carnival. Siegrist is of the opinion that next season will be the best ever yet experienced by the outdoor showman, and he intends to have one of the very best and cleanest shows that ever went on the road."

At a meeting of the Showmen's League of America held recently in New York, it was decided after a thorough discussion, that the annual event for this year would consist of a banquet and ball to follow the annual election of officers in February. The League has established an enviable reputation for this annual event and the majority of the members who were here attending the fair secretaries' meeting felt that we should fittingly celebrate the winning of the war by holding this event and making it bigger and grander than ever if that were possible. Members came from all over the country to attend and always look forward to this as being one big "get together" event of the year for the showmen. The prices of the tickets will be the same as last year $5.00 per plate, and as soon as it was announced about 150 tickets were subscribed for on the spot.

Edwin Hannaford, the great pantomime circus clown has made the hit of the season in the great Hippodrome in New York City and while he has been famous as a pantomime clown for some years, both in Europe and in this country, it was only a few days that he made the hit of his life and set all the New York talking about his part in "Dick Deadeye."

Edwin Hannaford, the clown equestrian at the Hippodrome, appeared in the part of "Dick Deadeye" in the condensed version of "Pinocchio" given at the Hippodrome. Hannaford has taken the leading role in many English pantomimes and was well known as a comedian on the stage. He has been received with great favor as a clown equestrian, he wishes to show his versatility and it was at his special request that he was allowed to play Dick Deadeye on Thursday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stickney who are taking up their old home in Cincinnati, Ohio writes of a letter he received from an old man whom he had never seen and this letter tells of all the famous riders including Mr. and Mrs. Stickney who the writer had seen with the different circuses including Bob Stickney's father who he said he saw ride with L. B. Lentz Circus in New York in '68. In this letter he named more than half a dozen riders from that time up to the present, and among them were at least six with whom I had traveled with years ago namely: Chas. W. Fish, James Robinson, Robert Stickney, and several other who long ago passed over the divide. The writer stated that although he had not known these people personally he had been interested in circus business ever since he was a boy of 12 years of age. And so far the same to him as they did more than half a century ago, and the names of these famous riders were still fresh in his mind. Although the writer had never seen Mr. Stickney and begged his pardon for writing so long a letter to a man who he had never met. Yet Mr. Stickney prizes the letter very highly and takes great pride in showing it to his friends. He immediately wrote his new made friend and told him how he appreciated receiving a letter from an entire stranger who took such an interest in the business and further stated that he hoped in the near future to meet him personally so that they might rehearse over the old days when the circus meant so much to the youngsters and when there were so many famous riders while today there are but few.

—MORRIS MILLER—

The purchase of Pitcher Pete Schneider from the Cincinnati Reds indicates that manager Miller Huggins of the Yankees plans to do considerable remodeling next spring on what is now one of the largest string of pitchers in baseball. The Yankees boss apparently is prepared to turn loose a flock of boxmen, for his pitching squad at this time includes more than twenty men. Many are veterans and on the outside it would appear that Huggins was well fixed in the department. His choice for new boxmen, as emphasized in the Schneider purchase, must mean that some of the old timers are slated to go.

Huggins closed the season with a staff made up of Plummer, Keating, Hendricks, Sanders and Love. A short time before the season closed, Pitcher Hank Robinson quit the club and returned to his home in Alabama. Huggins did the best work of the Yankees boxmen last season, and seems certain to be retained. Love pitched brilliantly at times and was poor at others. Keating and Hendricks did not enjoy the success that Huggins had hoped for and both may be returned to the minors. Robinson is through, as far as the New York club is concerned.

Sanders seemed enough promise to make Huggins enthrall over his prospects. The end of the war will mean the return of several pitchers who were in the service. Huggins is expected to play considerable baseball last season and both are in good condition today when they laid away their major league uniforms. Huggins remarked many times last season what a difference it would make if he had a shavetail or a pitcher to come upon when his pitching staff was cracking. Another boxman who comes back will be Herb Thormahlen, the sensational young southpaw who made such a great start last season.

Two pitchers counted upon heavily at the start of the 1917 campaign left the club during the season and they will be ready to return to the game in the spring. They are Ray Caldwell and Allen Russell. It is understood that a pronounced cold exists between Huggins and both players because they did not give him notice that they were quitting the team, as he asked all players to do. Huggins took the stand that a player desiring to quit the club had a perfect right to do so, but he insisted on being given notice, and these two players, also Robinson, hurried away too fast. They figure in some deals during the winter.

Yankee boxmen now wearing the khaki of Uncle Sam, but likely to be mustered out before another season opens, are Bob McGraw, Ed Monroe and Walter Smallwood, the last named being called into the army before the players were sent to training last March. Monroe is to be let out of service very soon, but the two others are supposed to be in France and their return may be delayed. As a star in the International League before he was taken by the Yankees.

Add to the list of pitchers enumerated above the boxmen acquired by the New York club near the close of the recent campaign who are yet to join the club. Though most clubs did no buying or drafting this year because of war conditions, Col. Jacob Ruppert of the Yankees believed that the end was in sight and he went out to corral any promising talent that was available. The New York club drafted Pitcher O'Doul from San Francisco and made two purchases of pitchers—Nelson from Memphis and Carpenter from Toledo. Their purchases of Jack Quinn, which had been made early in August, was officially promulgated by the National Commission late in the month after Chicago had put in claim for his services. Quinn became a member of the Yanks and Jack Carpenter passed to the White Sox so late in the year that neither was asked to make the change.

Huggins will try to use some of this surplus pitching material in trades for outfielders, at present the greatest need of the New York club.

Hazelton's Series of Stories By Famous Duck Hunters of America

BACK IN THE SWAMPS ON LITTLE RIVER.
By John B. Thompson.

He sees great gunsets burn and fade
And through his close-set window
Tremble along the dusky wave
The twilight splendor of lone stars.
The Old Decoy Duck.

Headless of the storm, the little brown, weather-beaten native reposed quietly on his pallet of reeds and grass.

He gave me no answer. I should have known better than to have tried to draw the attention of a Little River native to the rocking of the house. To him it was the sweetest of slumber songs—to me it was an unceasing, threatening each in paralleled wind, threatening each in parallel wind, threatening each in parallel wind, threatening each in parallel wind.

A new came a fierce booming gust of wind, apparently more formidable than any of its predecessors. The old duck rattled, pitched, then seemingly ashamed of its yielding that much to the elements, it dropped back with a soggy thud on its tottering piling, and rested in its original position.

Suddenly, after a short blow from the northwest, the wind desisted. Then all was tranquil. I lifted the latch, opened the door and peering out into what was swart darkness a moment before, I saw the gray of day seeping slowly yet unmistakably through the hurrying gray clouds. From the east, the sounds coming across the breaks of cypress, into the water-kill of tupelo gums, and wind-beaten swarms of saw grass, flag and yucca, bore the notes of a thousand bands of wildfowl already in flight.

Presently I saw Pete standing at my side, rubbing his dark eyes. "Been windy all night, I reckon," observed Pete, as he eyed me, "but the open water appearing. There'll be no ducks coming into decoys except in the big holes way back in the timber."

And Pete was right, as he always was when it came to a decision on matters concerning ducks. I followed we beheld thousands of ducks in flight, but not a single flock jumped from the water until we began to invade the heavy black timber.

We had thirty-five about as noisy decoy ducks as I ever heard talk. Evidently they were expressing pleasure at the passing of the storm or perhaps was it the prospects of the luscious little acorns, or the many crustaceans to be found in the shallow water? There was a particularly garulous hen—rather an older-sized little lady—who made up in vociferousness what she lacked in proportions. She was simply prattling all the time, endeavoring her utmost as she poised in the front of the duck boat, to call every band of feathered creatures in the sky.

The locality that Pete had chosen was a round, open waterhole covering about four acres and surrounded by tupelo gums. Marinating in the low-rotting stump, in the center of it where the grass was pressed down into a comfortable reposing bed it was warm to the touch of my hand, and Pete told me that just an instant before a deer had been resting there.

Hardly had those decoys started to feed when the ducks came in all at once. Pete never touched his lips to his walnut decoy. He didn't have to. That noisy hen did it all. Her powers were simply irresistible, for veritably she called them out of the clouds. Our scope of vision was necessarily narrowed by the tall trees. It was a new form of shooting to me. I never saw the ducks until they swung into the opening and pitched for the decoys. Mallards predominated, so many so that we only fired at the countless snags to keep them away from our decoys.

Whether it was the little hen or not, or the abundance of smartweed, I cannot tell. But I never saw ducks pour into a pond as these did. At first it was some unseen force into our waterhole. We could not keep them out. In a half an hour what began as sport threatened to turn into slaughter, if we persisted. We could never use half the ducks we killed, and even in that market hunter infested region my companion singularly was no market hunter. Just a lover of the wild whose livelihood was gained from trapping and guiding outsiders in the swamps.

"For God's sake stop!" Peter commanded. "We got enough. I never want to know what to do with what we have, 'nd if we keep this up there won't be no room in the boat fur them decoys."

Then I got a history of that little hen, as Pete described her: "She hain't got the looks much of a wild mallard, but she can out-mallard any decoy that ever lived!" Pete's statement was irrefutably beyond question. She was the single living product from the mating of a tame mallard drake and a crippled hen widgeon which the swamper had domesticated. Madam Widgeon only returned from her nest in the flag with this one youngster, and Pete said: "She was allus a hollerin' ever sence she was born, and I don't reckon she'll quit till she dies."

I am sure had that cross-bred little lady been permitted to remain two hours longer in that pond, she would have had it so packed with wildfowl that no more could crowd in. She was the last duck that we gathered, and when we put her in the bow of the heavily-laden duck boat she stood on top of a sleepy old drake and violently cried her siren song all the way home.

Pete pushed the boat home through a route hitherto unknown to me. Always through the heavy timber he seemed to sense the way of egress rather by instinct than sight. The grass grew taller, the timber heavier, and the density of the moss beds apparently defied progress. But the two never looked, seemingly bending his head in half-somnolent state, the small craft invariably found a passageway of water in the tangles just large enough for it. Repeatedly I thought the water route had abruptly terminated, but Pete still pushed on nonchalantly and water would appear before us only in boat-length bodies, though always sufficient for our passage, and too, we were drawing several inches more of water than is usually allotted to a duck boat on account of our big kill.

Gradually we drew close to Pete's shack. Pete threw out in the water all the decoys except my lady of the calling qualities. Evidently she was his favorite. Across the swamp in the west we heard the rattle of ditching machinery, which in a few years was destined to convert the wilderness into a land of productiveness.

I noted Pete, as he heard the sounds of the big engine cutting its way through the swamp. He was silent, pensive. His face was a study. I knew what he was thinking of, the passing away of this vast inundation into the control of man. And thoughts entered my mind quickly of what all this meant. Ducking grounds unparalleled for generations would soon feel the touch of the plowshare. Miles and miles of heavily timbered deer and turkey country would yield the staple crops of the South. With chagrin I gazed up at the sky, and saw flock after flock of mallards pitching into the willow oak shades. Then I turned to the little mallard hen. She was no more on the alert—her head turned half contemptively buried in her wing. Had she, too, lost her vocal vigor at the presaging destruction of her home?

HEARD FROM OUR SOLDIERS AND SAILORS

Miss Belle MacLean.
While the letters from the soldiers tell of the fighting in the trenches, behind the lines have been gallant bands of French soldiers who have been in the front line of the fight. The following letter from Miss Belle MacLean, who went over with the Milwaukee hospital unit, will be of interest. Miss MacLean writes she intends to stay for a transfer to some other unit that is to remain in France when her own is demobilized, so it may be months before she returns. Her letter is in two parts, the first dated September 20 and the next November 21. Both were written near Bordeaux from a Red Cross hospital. She says:

"I hardly know where to begin, so much has happened since I last wrote any of you, and already those things that seemed queer and fantastic at first, have become such a matter of course that the strangeness is forgotten. Moreover, from letters that have come to me from home, it seems as though the Red Cross is doing the work all without bothering to read them through. But, even then, much that is of interest, I cannot write at all. I have a whole paper, and only leave you plagued with curiosity as to what it was I said."

"Before we girls left base 8, to which hospital we had been assigned, when our own was hurried to completion against our coming, we had heard of the rumors of the barrenness of No. 22, which is but a part of a general center, and when we finally arrived there and descending from the ambulance, gaze about us, we thought the reports had fallen short. The place was not a hospital, but a jumping place. It is barren and treeless, muddy and dusty by turns, but justifying its name of 'Beautiful Desert.' For we have even discovered beauty. Down by the wall are the loveliest trees I have ever seen, very tall and straight and with a crown of verdure—cedars of Lebanon, they tell us, brought from the East, and the rays of brilliant red and the sunsets! The dusty atmosphere gives them an exquisite coloring that changes with every cloud and with every passing moment, so that one can only sit and marvel at the splendor. The country around is lovely, too, with wonderful roads that twist and turn and lose themselves in the windings through woods and fields; the narrowest country lane is as well built as our finest ones, as I proved to my own satisfaction in an afternoon spent bicycling riding on the machine presented to the girls by the Red Cross. Three hours I spent riding westward, I supposed, always choosing the lanes that curved in that direction, yet when I started homeward and followed the shortest route, I entered the camp from the east."

"Weeks have passed since I started to write you, and much has happened in that time, so that there has been no time for letters or anything else but work, work. Just about the time I started this letter they began to increase the size of the hospital, first by a thousand beds, then we took over the next door unit, then another until now we are running six, all with the personnel of our original one and a half. A blessed relief, which means that before we got settled here they were loaned out to other hospitals or sent up to the front, and now we cannot get them back. With increased capacity, we received increased convalescents, and they began to shoot them into us every day for a while. We worked day and night; the boys have never gone to bed at all some nights, and I have worked until one and two o'clock in the morning. When we had two days without a convoy we had grown so used to high pressure work that we caught up and were almost lost when we had time to relax a slow breath. Our last in-patient size occurred within a week, and we had sent in within two months a day. (I wish I had dared to tell you how many, but the censor would never permit it.) Now our camp has a night shift trained and working, and that is the explanation of my spare moments."

"It takes forever to buy a little of anything here. The French are dreadfully, dreadfully slow, and our struggle with the language and our confusion with a dictionary prolongs the process indefinitely. There are two big department stores here (big being about the size of a U. S. town of 25,000 would boast), but all the finer merchandise, lower prices, and specialties are sold in tiny specialty shops, and the window display gives absolutely no idea of what a shop will contain. I have not seen an attractive window display in Bordeaux, but in many of the finest goods."

"November 21, 1918.—The date on this letter will show that, at least, I had not forgotten my friends back home and had tried to tell them so, but another avalanche of work descended upon us, and it is not until now, two weeks since the end, and that the work has been straightened up enough to give me a little spare time. Yesterday I took my half day off and went to town, and today I have only done about an hour's work and have left the rest of it to my orderlies. Why work if I can make someone else do it for me? Up to now it has taken all three of us and a couple of night men to keep things going in my end."

"To return to where I left off. Unfortunately, we are not down a long way, some five miles from Bordeaux, with mighty little transportation. The street car only comes within two miles and the last one leaves down town at 7:30, so that a dinner in town is a mighty expensive proposition. It cannot be served until 8:30, by law, and the French are extremely slow, so that you cannot get through to catch the car, which means a taxi, and the drivers are simply hold-up men. They charge all the way from six to ten francs, and have to bring one out, and I noticed the bill for four of us one night and it was nearly thirty dollars, without the tip at the restaurant. I have been in a couple of times with a blessed officer, but that is all. Some of the time we haven't even been able to get a ride in on our half day. We have an ambulance now that will take six persons at a time, and more than that number wish to go in, the usual proceeding is to start on the walk to the car at Merignac and pray that a truck will come along so that you can bum a ride, as the cars run only every half hour and it takes nearly an hour and a half to get in. A dinner down town, though, is surely a rare treat, for the cooking is delicious."

"I don't know what we would do in town without the Y. M. C. A. Anything one wants to know—'Let's go to the Y.' To most of our friends at the Y, we telephone from the Y; we get change at the Y; we buy chocolate at the Y; we drink tea at the Y; and after a strenuous afternoon in the shops we go to the balcony of the Y and have a dish of ice cream or a glass of delicious cool beverage. The ice cream isn't like that of the states; it is all made with canned milk, and is up to the grains, but it helps satisfy our longing for our favorite American confection. As for candy—there are no candy shops in Bordeaux, not a one; it cannot be had, save when a consignment is received at our own commissaries, and in chocolate or stick candy. But in-badly discolored, and quite dilapidated, but perfectly satisfactory to their possessors. I smile to myself when I look at these queer old buildings, and think of the way Chinese houses are built, one perfectly good building and slaps up another, merely because it is of the style of fifteen years before. The store windows here have heavy iron shutters that are pulled down when they close; even during the two hours' nooning that is customary. The houses have few and narrow windows, always heavily shuttered, and with the shutters fast closed. The fresh air germ has not yet reached France. I imagine they think we are crazy, and on the warm summer days you never see shutters for door ajar. It must be awful to live your days in the dark! But we see nothing of the best of France, and little of any part of it. All our pleasures are among the boys, and our bit of America set down in France. I had meant to tell you about our hospital and life here, but if I do, I am going to mail it now, and immediately start another telling all about B. H. 23, to send you later, before our precious old unit becomes a thing of the past."

"Is it not wonderful, the things that have happened in the last two weeks? Here we are caring for five thousand patients and getting ready for hundreds from the American drive, and lo! the bottom drops out of everything and in a few days time we are talking of going home. At first we thought to be here until the very end, thought to be here until the very end, our officers talk of home in a few weeks. Not that anyone knows what is going to be done with No. 22, or that the immense camp here, but that everyone is surmising and guessing between the lines as the orders come in."

"I am not coming back with the 1st, and so much to come. I had expected to be here a couple of years, that I am not ready to plan the new life and work at home. I don't know what I want to do, or where I want to go. Major Gore has promised to transfer me into some branch of the work over here so that I can remain behind. I have so loved the life of the unit, the work with the boys, and the play with the team work, and the fine crowd of girls that I am going to miss it horribly, and it was had not meant wounds and death. I could have wished it might go on for years. I don't know where I am going or what I am going to do, as yet, but perhaps I will by the time my next letter gets written."

Yesterday the Christmas spirit reigned throughout the schools. In the morning a very interesting program was given by the children of the kindergarten to their mothers and friends. Evaded the Law.

It is against the laws of Massachusetts to disturb birds' nests and red tape was necessary before the owner of an auto truck was able to use his machine on that account. A pheasant bird built a nest in the running gear of an auto truck in a garage in Ware and laid three eggs in it. When the owner of the truck wanted to use his car he discovered the nest and had to call on the game warden to render an opinion before he could disturb the nest. The warden decided that under the circumstances it would be permissible to remove the nest without incurring the penalty of a $100 fine.

True and False Freedom.

There are two freedoms—the false, where a man is free to do what he likes; the true, where a man is free to do what he ought.—Charles E. Key.

Worth While Quotation.

Learn to be pleased with everything with wealth so far as it makes us of benefit to others; with poverty for not having much to care for, and with security for being unenvied.—Plutarch.

George McManus

Whose portrait and comic characters are here presented, stands today without a peer as a daily comic artist. For years he has been in the front rank, his Sunday comic features, "The Newkyls," "The Only Child," and "Roxie's Bear" having given him nationwide popularity and fame. Of all his creations, however, the one that has most endeared him to American readers is his great daily comic strip

Bringing Up Father

In this comic is unfolded the story of "Father," Jiggs, and how his socially ambitious wife, Maggie, and their daughter, struggle to make him over in manners and associations to conform with their views of Society's demands. Jiggs is by nature a conformist. The results, as depicted by McManus are side-splittingly funny. Starting Monday, Dec. 23, and regularly thereafter this world-famous comic will appear regularly

"Little Flower---but if I could understand what you are, root and all, and all in all, I should know what God and Man is."

Tennyson

The Heart of a Flower

"Heart of the flower am I; God's fragrant message of Love, Cheer, Hope and Sympathy. Freshened by Springtime showers, softened by gentle breezes and borne by the sunshine's splendor, I come to you a living expression of nature's tenderest thoughts"

When the MORNING of LIFE first dawns I am as the pure-white soul of the infant itself, an inspiration for the eyes of the weakened mother. For what mother does not liken the soul of her babe unto the tender "Heart of a Flower?"

Then in CHILDHOOD, when God beckons the little children to come unto Him at Easter-time, I go with them, the only befitting accompaniment to the brightness of their purity.

SUCCESS, TRIUMPH and ACCOMPLISHMENT in later years are acknowledged by admiring friends with flowers. So it is I, again, who touches the heart of the conquering hero, tempering the finer threads of thought of the fullness of the joy of winning.

As CUPID'S ALLY I am a "Ray of Beauty that outvalues all the utilities of the world." As a token of compliment and love my delicate sweetness expresses life's fondest hopes and affections.

To "SAY IT WITH FLOWERS" is to talk in the language of the heart—for journeys in June are most always planned over roads that have been strewn with roses before.

But I have spoken only of SUNSHINE, when, it is in the SORROW OF LIFE that my GREATEST BLESSINGS are manifest. To the little SICK BOY, the poor CRIPPLED MAN, the SHUT-IN GIRL, into whose life there seldom creeps much of the joy of living, I am EVERYTHING—LOVE, HOPE, BEAUTY, SYMPATHY—they see them all in my tender petals.

I do my best to cheer them—even unto death. And THEN, at last, I am there as a tribute of respect from loved ones, to usher the souls of the departed into the beautiful Hereafter.

In the JOY and SORROW of life my soothing influence is needed. Even now, when the greatest countries on the face of the earth are fighting, in order that the beautiful things of life may not die—let all good people keep alive the God-inspired custom of "SENDING FLOWERS."

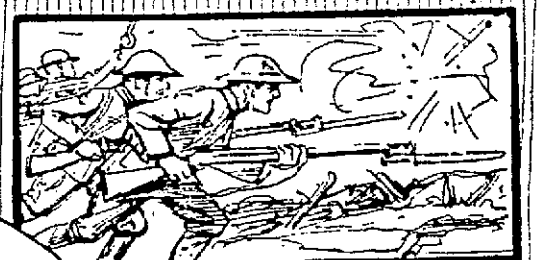

Let us aid you in the giving of beautiful flowers. We urge you to make a personal visit to the Flower Shop and see for yourself the beauty of the flowers on display.

Just now Christmas decorations are given prominence, Holly, Christmas Wreaths, Cut Flowers and Potted Plants for gift giving.
